

USEFUL INFORMATION

Language travel is a very complex subject area. This is why we offer numerous resources with information on the most important issues to consider before, during and after a language stay.

Language stays have become increasingly popular in the age of global communication. In today's world, good language skills and cultural knowledge are key factors for success.

Furthermore, the requirements of schools, universities and employers are constantly evolving. In this context, language proficiency and practical international experience are becoming increasingly important. Be it as a kickstart and motivation boost for a child's language classes at school, as a stepping stone for preparing or qualifying for a certain career or simply as a meaningful way to spend a holiday, language-stay programmes can be rewarding and valuable experiences for adults and young learners. And with our Language-Stay Finder you will have no problem finding the right language-stay programme for you.

Today, language stays are increasingly viewed as a lifestyle product that satisfies our desire for meaningful travel experiences by offering an ideal combination of personal development, interesting acquaintanceships and various sports and cultural activities. Language stays also offer a perfect travel format for solo travellers because, after you arrive, it is easy to make contact with like-minded people from around the world and team up with them for interesting tours of discovery.

No matter what type of language stay you choose, you should always book through a high-quality language school or tour operator in your home country. Tour operators only work with the highest-quality schools and programmes and are able to accurately assess their customer's needs and offer professional advice. Moreover, a tour operator in your home country is a competent partner who can help defend your interests in the event of a conflict.

In terms of teaching methods, accommodations, on-site supervision and extracurricular activities, language stays for adults differ greatly from the language-stay programmes offered for young learners. This is why these two types of language stays are covered in separate sections of our website.

Be sure to take advantage of the tour operators' advisory services and find the language stay that best fits your needs and interests – enjoy immersing yourself in the adventure of language-learning!

WHAT IS A LANGUAGE STAY, AND WHAT OPTIONS ARE THERE?

Language stays of various durations are available for travellers of practically any age. A wide range of languages can be learned or improved in numerous countries around the world.

A language stay includes regular language classes, accommodation, travel to and from the destination and a programme of leisure and cultural activities. In the traveller's free time, there are many opportunities for getting to know not only the country and its people, but also the other international participants. Language courses are run in groups of learners from different countries and offered in various formats, ranging from private tuition and group lessons to highly intensive business-language courses in mini-groups.

The two- to three-week language courses for young learners can be easily organised during the school holidays.

For young people who have already finished secondary school, language courses in a foreign country can be a great way to improve language proficiency and gain international experience before starting university studies or vocational training. Language-stay programmes can also be combined with other types of activities, like volunteer work, internships or travel. In such cases, the language course generally takes place at the beginning of the trip to help the traveller acclimate to the culture and mentality of the host country.

TARGET GROUP

A language stay is the perfect travel option for anyone interested in combining learning with pleasure. What better way is there to learn a new language or improve your language skills while getting to know a country and its people? Language stays are suitable for travellers of all ages who are open-minded and interested in other cultures and languages. There is no upper age limit, which is why language stays have also become a very popular form of travel among older adults.

The minimum age is 8, but young people generally go on their first language trip between the ages of 12 and 14.

AVERAGE LENGTH OF STAY

Most language-stay programmes are 2 to 3 weeks in length and year round. For young learners most of the language courses take place during the school holidays. Longer programmes are generally aimed at young people who have graduated from secondary school or university.

SECURITY & TRANSPARENCY

The FDSV creates transparency through its continuous monitoring of the language-stay market. With its Quality Guidelines, the FDSV helps interested language learners find language schools that suit their needs.

Beside the Language-Stay E-Book, the Quality Guidelines and the checklist with numerous facts and tips can help you plan a perfectly tailored language stay.

TIPS FOR A SUCCESSFUL LANGUAGE STAY

- Take advantage of free, expert advice.
- Book through a well-known language school or tour operator. This guarantees a high level of security, transparency and added value.
- Insist on receiving a detailed description of the programme: before your trip, the language school or tour operator should provide you with its contact information, the terms of payment, all travel documents and information on services related to meals, travel, local transfers and leisure programmes.
- Pay attention to group size! Choose courses with no more than 15 participants per group; small groups (e.g. mini-groups with a maximum of 8 participants) are even more effective.

- Give preference to language courses that include an on-site placement test – ideally both written and oral. Some language schools offer an online language test before the trip.
- Choose a travel package that includes not only a suitable language course, but also a sports and leisure programme appropriate to the participant's age. This component is particularly important for young learners.
- Be sure to check to what extent young travellers will be accompanied on their flights, train/coach trips and local transfers and whether transfers to and from the airport or train/coach station are included in the price.
- Ask about group composition: at the place of accommodation, there should ideally be no more than two guests of the same native language. However, it is also possible to place friends together upon request.

INDEPENDENT SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY BOARD

When it comes to language stays, nothing is more important to the success of the learner than the quality of the programme. This is why the Scientific Advisory Board of the Association of German Language-Tour Operators (FDSV) regularly reviews the catalogues and websites of the FDSV members and evaluates their services through on-site inspections.

The Scientific Advisory Board is an independent body of experts. Its sole obligation is to verify compliance with the Quality Guidelines of the FDSV.

RESPONSIBILITIES

The independent assessment of language-stay programmes by external experts, as one of the most effective means of ongoing quality control, is absolutely essential. This is why for nearly 40 years the Scientific Advisory Board of the FDSV has been regularly reviewing the catalogues and websites of the FDSV members and evaluating their services through on-site inspections.

The FDSV Scientific Advisory Board evaluates the Association members on a regular basis to verify compliance with the FDSV Quality Guidelines and the European standard for language-study tour providers (EN 14804) by

- reviewing the members' catalogues, websites and travel documents and
- performing on-site inspections of the language schools.

The language schools and accommodation sites of the FDSV members are evaluated in the context of routine inspection visits. Interviews are conducted with the school management, language teachers and group leaders regarding the language programmes, teacher training and programmes of leisure activities. The inspectors sit in on lessons, evaluate teaching materials and ask participants about their level of satisfaction with the respective programme.

The independent Scientific Advisory Board assesses the quality of the language tours and courses offered by the FDSV's members and is in constant dialogue with the FDSV. It makes suggestions about maintaining and improving the quality of the language stays.

ADMISSION OF NEW MEMBERS

Before a language school or tour operator is accepted as a new member of the FDSV, the independent Scientific Advisory Board carries out random language-school inspections and evaluates the catalogues and Internet presence of the applicant to verify compliance with the FDSV Quality Guidelines and the European standard for language-study tour providers (EN 14804).

ACTIVITIES

Over the past 40 years the Scientific Advisory Board has carried out more than 1,000 school inspections in numerous European countries, as well as the United States, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

LANGUAGE-STAY PROGRAMMES FOR YOUNG LEARNERS

With the constantly evolving requirements of schools, universities and employers, language proficiency and practical international experience are becoming increasingly important. Language-stay programmes for school-age children are still extremely popular. Young language learners plan these trips for many different reasons. For example, some may see a language stay as a means of improving their marks at school, while others may be interested in learning more about other countries and cultures while practising or mastering the local language “in the process”.

Language-stay programmes for young learners are not just about improving vocabulary and grammar: many young people plan language trips with the aim of becoming more confident in their use of the language. These experiences can also promote self-reliance and openness to other cultures and mentalities.

When booking a language stay for a young learner, it is important to make sure that the course also includes a programme of sports, excursions and leisure activities with age-appropriate supervision. The catalogues should specify which activities are included in the price. Other important considerations are the lesson content and composition of the teaching staff, as well as to what extent the child will be accompanied by an adult while travelling to, from and within the destination city and how the school ensures that learning groups are appropriate to the child’s age and level of proficiency.

TARGET GROUP

Language-stay programmes are suitable for any child who is open-minded and interested in other cultures and languages. The minimum age is 8, but young people generally go on their first language trip between the ages of 12 and 14.

AVERAGE PROGRAMME LENGTH

Most language-stay programmes are 2 to 3 weeks in length and take place during the school holidays.

WHAT TYPES OF COURSES ARE OFFERED?

The most popular type of course is the classic language-stay programme with morning classes – or both morning and afternoon classes if an intensive course is chosen – combined with a homestay. The choice of language course is generally based on the needs and aims of the participant.

Options range from standard and intensive courses to mini-group courses, business courses and bespoke private tuition. These options can also be combined: e.g. a mini-group course (max. 8 participants) with private tuition. Targeted, one-to-one tuition, usually offered in combination with group courses, enables pupils to focus on specific school requirements.

Holiday Course	15 lessons per week. Covers general language skills, e.g. vocabulary, grammar and conversation.
Main Course/ Standard Course	20 lessons per week. Covers general language skills, e.g. vocabulary, grammar and conversation.
Intensive Course/ Mini-Group Course/ Combination Course	25 – 30 lessons per week in standard groups of no more than 15 participants. Mini-group courses are particularly effective owing to the small group size of 6 – 8 participants. In addition to courses covering general language skills, it is also possible to book one-to-one tuition on specific topics. Intensive and mini-group courses with a focus on business are also available.
Private Tuition	An ideal alternative for language travellers with a limited amount of time. This option enables the participant to achieve optimal results within a short time frame. These courses can be booked with a specified number of lessons or areas of focus. The minimum programme length is one week.

In addition to the classic types of courses, numerous special formats are available, including family language stays, high-school-preparation courses and exam-preparation courses.

WHAT TYPES OF ACCOMMODATION ARE AVAILABLE?

The participant can choose to live with a host family or stay at a student residence or boarding school/college.

The least expensive and certainly most authentic option is a homestay (host family). Participants who need more independence and prefer to spend their time in a group of people with similar interests should choose accommodation at a student residence or boarding school. Those who do not mind sacrificing a little flexibility for the chance to fully immerse themselves in local life should choose a homestay. However, although this form of accommodation can be chosen for language learners of all ages, it is important to bear in mind that children staying with a host family cannot be supervised around the clock owing to their trips to and from the school. Therefore, accommodation at a boarding school/college should be chosen for young learners who are very inexperienced and less independent. At these accommodation sites, group leaders are on duty 24 hours a day. In addition, the child does not have to travel long distances alone, as is sometimes the case with homestays.

HOW IMPORTANT ARE LEISURE ACTIVITIES?

Leisure activities complement the language lessons and play a very important role in the overall language-stay experience. These activities give the participants more opportunities to improve their skills and spend time with other language learners while getting to know the country and its people. In this sense, excursions and tours are important components of the language stay. The leisure programme should be appropriate to the age of the language learner. For example, older teens expect to have more freedom while younger participants still require very close supervision. Programmes at boarding schools tend to offer more sports activities than the classic language-school programme because boarding schools have the appropriate facilities.

Some language-stay programmes for young learners allow participants to choose either a mix of activities or a specific type of sports training, like tennis, golf or horse riding. A mixed leisure programme generally consists of various sightseeing, sports, cultural and creative activities.

TRAVEL AND LOCAL TRANSFER

For most of the programmes, customers can either organise and book their own travel or choose an all-inclusive package that covers travel to and from the site.

Customers who plan to use their own car or think they could find less expensive travel options themselves should choose the option “independent travel arrangements”.

It is also possible to request that the travel costs be subtracted from an all-inclusive package. However, bear in mind that booking your own travel does not always pay off in the end.

WHAT IS THE ADDED VALUE OF A LANGUAGE STAY?

Language-stay programmes are much more than simply a means of improving language skills. In the case of young learners, such programmes are often the child’s first solo trip to another country and can therefore be an important step on their journey to becoming more independent. Language-stay programmes promote not only personal development but also confidence in the use of the language. In addition, they enable the participant to experience the culture and mentality of the respective host country first-hand.

WHAT SHOULDN’T YOU EXPECT FROM A LANGUAGE STAY?

Schoolchildren should not expect their language marks to improve drastically after their trip. This is impossible to achieve through a programme that only lasts an average of 14 days with approx. 20 lessons per week. However, participants will certainly notice an improvement in their language proficiency and feel considerably more confident, particularly in their communication skills. In general, the extent to which improvements can be achieved will depend on the length of the programme, the intensity of the language course and the size of the group. Owing to the numerous cultural and language differences, many things will feel unfamiliar to the participant. It helps to have reasonable expectations, be flexible and keep an open mind. With this attitude, you are sure to enjoy an exciting and successful language-stay experience.

LANGUAGE STAYS FOR ADULTS

In the development of language-stay programmes for adults, language schools are placing increasing importance on the career focus of the lessons. In addition to the classic business course, it is also possible to work on specific professional requirements through targeted, one-to-one tuition, usually in combination with group courses. Be it technical, social, management, engineering, sales or teaching careers, bespoke language stays have become increasingly common.

A language stay includes regular language classes, accommodation, travel to and from the site and a programme of leisure and cultural activities. In the learner's free time, there are many opportunities for getting to know not only the country and its people, but also the other international participants. Courses are taught in groups of learners from different countries.

Language stays of various durations are available for travellers of practically any age. A wide range of languages can be learned or improved in many different countries around the world.

Today, language stays are increasingly viewed as a lifestyle product that satisfies our desire for meaningful travel experiences by offering a perfect combination of personal development, interesting acquaintanceships and various sports and cultural activities. Not only communicative singles but also "over-50s" have discovered language-stay programmes as an ideal type of holiday. Most of the participants between the age of 55 and 65 who take part in special 50+/60+ programmes have not only a strong interest in other cultures, but also a desire to make contact with people from the host country and explore the region with like-minded travellers.

In addition, there are many special programmes of activities that provide opportunities for experiencing the country's unique traditions or visiting tourist attractions.

TARGET GROUP

These options can also be combined: e.g. a mini-group course (max. 8 participants) with private tuition. WHAT TYPES OF ACCOMMODATION ARE AVAILABLE?

Participants can book their accommodation in a host family, an apartment, a shared flat, a student residence or a hotel. The least expensive and certainly most authentic option is a homestay (host family). Participants who prefer to be more independent and spend their time in a group of people with similar interests should choose a shared flat or student residence. An apartment or hotel offers more comfort, but these options are also much more expensive. Those who do not mind sacrificing a little flexibility for the chance to fully immerse themselves in local life should choose a homestay. By the way, this form of accommodation can be booked by participants of any age.

HOW IMPORTANT ARE LEISURE PROGRAMMES, AND WHAT TYPES OF ACTIVITIES ARE OFFERED?

Adults enjoy the flexibility of being able to choose between participating in organised extracurricular activities or planning their own activities based on personal interests. Leisure activities complement the language lessons and play a very important role in the overall language-stay experience. These activities give the participants more opportunities to improve their skills and spend time with other language learners while getting to know the country and its people. In this sense, excursions and tours are important components of the language stay.

TRAVEL AND LOCAL TRANSFERS

For most of the programmes, customers can either organise and book their own travel or choose an all-inclusive package that covers travel to and from the site.

Customers who, for example, plan to use their own car or think they could find less expensive travel options themselves should choose “independent travel arrangements”.
